Alpine protected areas 2030 A shared vision for the future

12th - 13th of October 2015
Berchtesgaden - Haus der Berge - Germany

The workshop aims to identify new challenges for the protected areas for the next years: challenges in nature protection and regional development and new governance models for a responsible management of natural spaces and cultural landscapes in the Alps. The alpine protected areas will face various new challenges during the next years, mainly linked to climate change, demographic movements, changing political frame conditions and socio-economic needs of the Alpine society.

Which strategy should be developed for the daily work of protected area managers? How to find the means to fulfill new tasks while preserving the main mission of nature protection? How to make sure to take the right direction and which are the priorities for international cooperation between Alpine protected areas? How to adapt the services and tools offered by ALPARC?

All these and other questions will be discussed in Berchtesgaden, to develop a new vision for the alpine protection areas – together towards 2030!
